

MAY 30 - TREK AROUND CAVE LAKE

A pretty uneventful day today. Alfie saw 120,000 miles on the speedometer and we drove into Ely. While Jen attended to some chores, I spent a couple of hours in the library updating the blog.

Back at the campground, in the afternoon I felt like exploring Cave Lake a little more. I ended up walking around the lake. The trail started off okay but about half-way around, became more of a "okay...where's it go now?"

Tomorrow we leave Ely heading west across the "loneliest road in America" a.k.a. Hwy 50. We'll see you somewhere along the way!
