

Vancouver Island West Coast – Sep 20

Today we visited Ucluelet in the rain. Geez, it just wouldn't stop. Hmmm, what part of the wet coast have we forgotten?!

We find Zoe's Bakery and Café for a morning coffee. I dunno whether we were too late, but they sure didn't have much to offer (for a bakery!).

However, because the café did not have a lot of seating, we asked to share a table with a young couple. As it turned out, Max and Tessa are teachers from New Zealand who have a 2-year visa to tour Canada. We had a lovely chat with them over coffee. I gave them our card and we wished them well for the rest of their travels. Oh to be young again—no, not really.

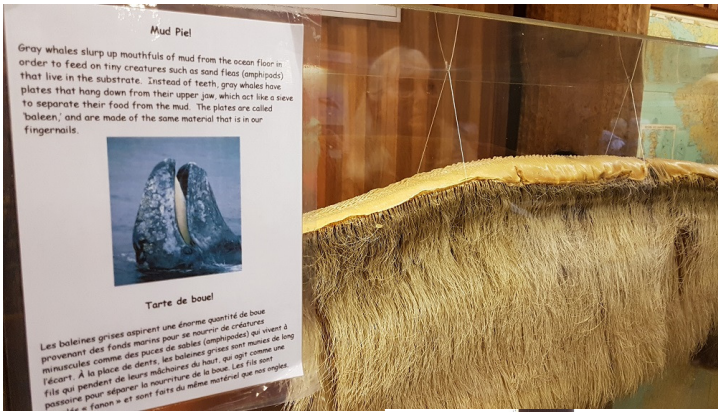

Vancouver Island West Coast – Sep 21

Well it's supposed to rain all day today. So time to do something out of the rain like visit the Kw'isitit Visitor Centre at the south end of the park.

We walked in the rain to the Centre and both remarked that the building is the old Wickaninish Inn. We remember visiting the Inn many years ago, enjoying a coffee, and looking out at the mighty Pacific Ocean.

Run by First Nations, the displays deal a lot with the flora and fauna of the park as well as the cultural heritage of the Nuu-chah-nulth people.

From the second floor, we enjoyed the view.

If the weather forecast is correct, tomorrow you'll find us on a beach somewhere.
See you then.
